

Ambassador Girl Scout Way

As a Girl Scout Ambassador, you're perfectly poised to help our sisterhood fly into its second powerful century. Though the badges, books, and presidents have changed along the way, some things have always been the Girl Scout way: Through song and celebration, service and action, the Movement continues to educate, inspire, and bring people together. Share our legacy in this badge as you spread your wings and launch Girl Scouting into the future.

Steps:

1. Use song to bring people together or to spread a message
2. Celebrate World Thinking Day
3. Share sisterhood around the world
4. Leave your world better than you found it
5. Enjoy Girl Scout traditions!

Purpose

When I've earned this badge, I'll know how to use the Girl Scout ways and traditions to make the world a better place.

QUOTE:

Throughout our history the emergency seems always to have found the man. And they have always been prepared by our great women. For even if a man has not a wife it is seldom that any great thing is done that is not helped on by a woman.

—How Girls Can Help Their Country, 1913

Step 1: Use song to bring people together or spread a message

Singing brings us all together and helps us feel connected, strong, and proud. Girl Scouts sing in special places or to mark special times—or sometimes just for the fun of it! As an Ambassador, use song to help you share what you care about most. Is your passion caring for the environment? Supporting girls' rights around world? Teaching younger girls how to get along? Inspire others to spread the message.

Ambassador Girl Scout Way

Choices—do one:

Use music to move people to action. Throughout history, songs have helped rally people to causes. Find songs that give voice to hopes and concerns, learn their histories, and think about how and why they inspire. Then pick a song that matches a cause you're passionate about, sing it with others, and get others inspired, too—that's often a first step to making change.

Organize a songfest for younger Girl Scouts. Together, decide on the message you want your songs to spread. Then guide the girls toward great songs with that spirit. Teach them the songs you know, those they'd like to know, and some songs hardly anyone knows yet. It's a Girl Scout way to know the history of the songs we sing, so share those histories together as you prepare for the songfest.

For More FUN: Open or close your songfest with a Scouts' Own.

Bring generations together in song. Organize a Girl Scout alumnae event centered on singing—perhaps an alumnae tea during Girl Scout Week—and get former Girl Scouts singing their favorite Girl Scout songs and recalling cherished memories. Learn some songs that are no longer sung so you can pass them on to the Girl Scouts' future.

SIDEBAR: Scouts' Own

"A voluntary uplifting of their hearts . . . in thanksgiving for the joys of life." In these words, Lord Baden-Powell described the quiet and reverent communion known as Scouts' Own.

—Senior Girl Scout Handbook, 1963

A Scouts' Own may be a carefully planned and rehearsed ceremony or it may be an almost spontaneous time when Girl Scouts reflect together on a shared experience. Anytime and anyplace where Girl Scouts are gathered together, indoors or out, is the right time and place! The beauty of nature, unusual examples of honor or courage or kindness, inspiration in music or art—any of these would be a great theme. A good Scouts' Own brings the theme to life through poetry, stories, music, and pictures. Whatever the theme, it is the "uplifting of hearts" that really makes this ceremony a traditional Scouts' Own.

Step 2: Celebrate World Thinking Day

Ambassador Girl Scout Way

Girl Scout celebrations honor women and girls who change the world. As an Ambassador, celebrate World Thinking Day. This event, which takes place every February 22, is both a chance to celebrate international friendships and also a reminder that the Girl Scouts of the USA is part of a global community: the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts (WAGGGS). Check the WAGGGS website to find out this year's World Thinking Day theme, and then help younger Girl Scouts with one of the activities below.

Choices—do one:

Follow in the steps of female leaders. Find out about women who have been leaders this year in areas relevant to the World Thinking Day theme. Think about the leadership qualities they've demonstrated and the lines of the Girl Scout Law they embody. Then share what you've learned by helping younger Girl Scouts plan an event or project honoring these women—perhaps a community panel and party, a video interview, or a collective letter to your local newspaper.

Make World Thinking Day cards. Get a group of girls thinking about what world peace and international friendship mean to them, and help them turn their ideas into drawings, paintings, collages, or other images for World Thinking Day greeting cards. Then take the initiative to find a group that the cards will inspire and educate—perhaps the girls' classmates, community members, or friends overseas. Organize sending the cards to the group you find.

Earn their World Thinking Day award. Research the World Thinking Day theme of the year and the steps girls need to complete the award at their grade level. Then plan a workshop for adult volunteers to help them assist girls in earning the award. Collect any supplies the girls will need, and assemble resource kits for the adult volunteers.

Tip: Try to celebrate on World Thinking Day to enjoy the power and joy of the whole sisterhood—or you celebrate another day of your choice.

SIDEBAR: The Juliette Gordon Low World Friendship Fund

The Juliette Gordon Low World Friendship Fund was brought into being to honor Juliette Low and her dream of increased understanding and friendship among girls around the world. The Fund provides the ways and means for exchange visits between Girl Scouts and Girl Guides of other countries. If you are interested in making a donation—on your own or with your group—more information is available on the Girl Scout website. These contributions are also used to support the World Thinking Day Fund, which helps to encourage the development of Girl Guiding and Girl Scouting in new countries.

Step 3: Share sisterhood around the world

All the girls and women who are Girl Scouts try to live by the Girl Scout Law. That's what makes us a Girl Scout sisterhood—our Law unites us. In your Ambassador badge, use the Law's 10 important lines to get closer to women and girls around the world.

Choices—do one:

Explore an issue affecting girls and women globally. Invite a guest speaker to talk to your group about education, economic empowerment, health services, or other issues affecting women and girls. Your speaker might be a Peace Corps volunteer, someone from an aid organization, teacher, author, or a member of the religious community or armed forces who has served overseas. Guide a discussion of how you might use the Girl Scout Law to make a difference in the issue.

Organize an event on women and STEM careers. People with careers in science, technology, engineering, and math (STEM) solve problems that affect girls and women around the world by figuring out how to use resources wisely to make the world a better place. But in the U.S., men outnumber women in STEM careers nearly three to one. Help narrow the gap: Host a job fair or panel discussion to educate and inspire girls about STEM jobs. Guide the discussion to encourage girls to consider how geology, civil and environmental engineering, product innovation, nanotechnology, ethnobiology, and other fields could help them share the Girl Scout Law through their careers.

Interview a global citizen. Find a woman in an international career field (perhaps a pilot, hotel staffer, international banker or teacher, naval officer, or translator) who is from another country or has lived abroad. Learn all about her job in an interview. Discuss the ways her job embodies—or could embody—the Girl Scout Law. Share what you've learned creatively—perhaps in an article for your school paper, in a career collage you keep by your desk for inspiration, or by organizing a roundtable “world thinking” careers discussion for your peers.

SIDEBAR: Language = Connection

Learning a new language opens the doors of the world in a way nothing else can. New words give you new ways to think: Some words and concepts in other languages have no

Ambassador Girl Scout Way

English equivalent, and vice versa. Knowing more than one language is one of the most powerful skills a leader can have—you can communicate with people you otherwise couldn't reach, and serve as a liaison between cultures, fostering friendships and goodwill. As the Girl Scout Handbook noted in 1953: "If you want to learn a language, you can." Today, there isn't (yet) a badge like the World Interpreter badge from 1940—but it's inspiring to see what girls were doing then, and to imagine learning the skills to do the same

Try writing the Girl Scout Law and Promise in the language chosen. If possible, compare these with an official copy in this language and see if you can discover any differences in meaning.

Translate quickly and accurately a conversation from a foreign language into English; one from English into a foreign language.

Start a collection of interesting words in the language that have become, either in the original or in slightly changed form, a part of our vocabulary.

Find out if there are any opportunities in your community where you might act as an interpreter to a person speaking the language but not speaking English well. For instance, you might assist in a baby clinic, helping to make foreign-born mothers feel comfortable and at home.

>>> Here's one you could try, even if you're just starting a new language:

Decide how you would tell a group of Brownies about the language, about the people who speak it, and how you would give them a beginning interest in speaking this language, perhaps through a game or song. Be ready to do this if you are invited.

Step 4: Leave your world better than you found it

It's the Girl Scout way to care about the world around us—whether it's a room, a campground, or the world. As an Ambassador, try one of these choices to gather ideas right now for improving the world today—and at every stage of your life.

Choices—do one:

Ambassador Girl Scout Way

Find ideas to use your leadership and ideas in government. Choose a civic issue that you want to affect throughout your life, and explore ways to make government a better place. Your list should include at least 10 strong ideas: Gather them through brainstorming with other Girl Scouts, by speaking with elected officials, and by researching the organizations working in your area right now. What are they doing? What still needs to be done?

Gather ideas to work for a healthy planet. Choose an environmental issue that you want to affect throughout your life, and explore ways to make the environment a better place. Your list should include at least 10 strong ideas: You might focus on a specific ecosystem, such as forests, oceans, seashores, rivers, grasslands, mountains, or farmland, and research organizations working to protect that kind of area. What are other activists doing right now? How effective does the work seem to be? How could you support that work, and what else could you do?

Brainstorm ideas for social change. Choose a social issue that you want to affect throughout your life, and explore ways to improve the systems that create or contribute to the issue. Your list should include at least 10 strong ideas: You might gather them through discussions with advocates for your issue, speaking with elected officials, or spending an afternoon volunteering for an organization doing work in your area of interest. What's being done? What more could you do?

Tip: The ideas you gather in this step might even be the seed of your Gold Award or another Take Action project!

Step 5: Enjoy Girl Scout traditions

Traditions bring people together. A tradition can be a special food, a ceremony, a song—anything that’s passed along through the years. Celebrate and share with others all that Girl Scouting does for girls, and help those traditions stay strong for another 100 years (and more!).

Choices—do one:

Learn from famous Girl Scouts. Research the biographies of three famous Girl Scouts or Girl Guides in different professional fields. Know their backgrounds, accomplishments, leadership qualities, and how their lives reflect the values of the Girl Scout Law. Share your stories about how Girl Scouting prepares girls for future success with parents of younger Girl Scouts and interested community members (perhaps those who’ve helped girls in your area with Leadership Journeys!).

Advance diversity. Talk with current or alumnae Girl Scouts, volunteers, or staff, or go online to get statistics and stories about diversity in the Girl Scouts. Then, take one action to help make the Girl Scouts an organization every girl has access to. Perhaps it’s helping your volunteer team hold a “Get to Know Girl Scouts” night for families from diverse groups, or introducing kindergartners in an immigrant community to the Flower Friends.

Showcase your own traditions. First, watch The Golden Eaglet, a promotional film for the Girl Scouts made in 1918. Talk with your Senior friends about the similarities and differences in Girl Scouts now and then. Finally, make a three-minute film or digital slide show that shares your ideas about why Girl Scout traditions are important and how they benefit girls. Girls who see it might be inspired to get involved in the fun, friendship, and action!

SIDEBAR: Page from the Past

1913 Skills

The first Girl Scout handbook includes instructions on how to stop a runaway horse and how to tie up a burglar with eight inches of cord. It reveals much about how Girl Scouts—and the roles of girls and women—have evolved, and about how many skills have stayed useful over the years. For step 1, you might find one such skill and teach it. For example:

- “We walk too little in America. Between the trolley car and the automobile, the noble art of walking seems in danger of being lost. To use the expressive slang phrase, ‘it’s up to’ the Scouts to revive and preserve it.” How could you encourage more walking in your community?
- “As it may happen someday that a life may depend on a knot being tied properly, you ought to know the proper way to do so.” Perhaps you could teach a knot-tying workshop at your school.
- “Don’t try to cook with fat pine. It’s all right to kindle with, but not for cooking. Your bacon fried over it will be as fine as eating porous plaster.” Many people never learn to make a campfire. Could you teach them how, and show them how to cook something delicious over it?

Now that I’ve earned this badge, I can give service by:

- Helping girls communicate with their world sisters
- Creating a Girl Scout tradition that exemplifies our Promise and Law
- Inspiring other girls and women to get involved in the Movement
