

Ambassador Space Science Master Badge

Careers in Space Science

Explore the suggested links below to discover what's right for you.

Organizations of STEM professionals offer tools to help investigate different paths of study for a variety of careers—some even offer scholarship assistance. Learn more:

- Women in Aerospace: <http://www.womeninaerospace.org>
- Society of Women Engineers: <http://societyofwomenengineers.swe.org>
- MAES: Latinos in Science and Engineering: <http://mymaes.org>
- National Society of Black Physicists: <http://nsbp.org>
- National Society of Black Engineers: <http://www.nsbe.org>
- American Indian Science and Engineering Society: <http://www.aises.org>
- American Astronomical Society: <https://aas.org/learn/planning-your-education>

Be sure to check out “A New Universe to Explore: Careers in Astronomy,” an AAS Committee on the Status of Women in Astronomy: <https://cswa.aas.org>

- Division of Planetary Sciences: <https://dps.aas.org/education/graduate-schools>

Although this is a list of graduate programs, these schools also offer exceptional undergraduate courses of study.

- American Geophysical Union:

Check out “Paths Through Science”: <http://careers.agu.org/paths>

Explore the AGU Blogosphere: <http://blogs.agu.org>

- IEEE: Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers: <http://tryengineering.org/university>
- American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics: <https://www.aiaa.org/default.aspx>
- Careers in Aerospace: <https://www.aiaa.org/Secondary.aspx?id=309>
- NASA: <https://nasajobs.nasa.gov/>